Build Your Energy Muscle

Home Upgrade helps you identify ways to strengthen your home's energy efficiency, taking what is known as a “whole-house” or systems approach. The whole-house approach to energy efficiency considers the house as an energy system with interdependent parts, each of which affects the performance of the entire system.

With a whole-house approach, you will learn how heating, air conditioning, insulation, water, and other systems can all work together to effectively reduce energy consumption and reduce energy costs. Get maximum energy efficiency results when you combine home improvements, just like working all the muscle groups in your body.

Follow an Energy Fitness Routine That's Right for You

Warm up with a Home Upgrade

Install energy efficiency improvements such as attic insulation, duct sealing, gas or electric water heater, and high-efficiency air conditioning.

Motivation to get fit:
$1,000 – $2,500 in rebates!

Exercise your choices with an Advanced Home Upgrade

A participating contractor will complete a home energy assessment to determine which customized improvements will maximize your home's energy efficiency. These can include any Home Upgrade improvements plus additional improvements such as cool roof, interior and exterior lighting, whole-house fan, windows, and more.

Motivation to get fit:
$1,000 – $4,500 rebates for improvements plus $300 home energy assessment rebate!
