Corie & Peter Knights. For their successful charity, WildAid, that works on helping to end the demand for endangered wildlife products like ivory, shark fins, rhino horns and more by producing Public Service Announcements in countries where these products are in high demand. WildAid is the only organization in the world to focus solely on ending the demand for endangered wildlife products. Corie and Peter live in Lafayette, and they work with celebrities and many others to produce high-end PSAs to play in countries where the demand for such wildlife products is highest. Their messages reach one billion people weekly through ads and include the message “When the buying stops, the killing can too”.

Julian Jackl. For leading the campaign to reduce single-use plastic at Burton Valley Elementary School which led to the school forgoing all plastic utensils for metal reusable flatware. Julian is a fifth grade student who led a campaign to reduce single-use plastics in elementary schools. The school will no longer use plastic utensils, and will switch to metal, reusable flatware. With a school of roughly 800 students, that is a huge impact on plastic that will be saved from the landfill.
